Serene Kwaj life turns to 'Nightmare on Taro Street'

By Lauren Traweek

One afternoon I was putting the finishing touches on two loads of laundry and my clean house, musing on how well I had adapted to living in Kwajalein, how we had made so many good friends, how we had finally gotten the house and yard together, how we learned to adjust recipes ala Surfway and all the other little nuances that come after living here two years. Yes, I was smiling to myself and probably just a little smug, when my friend Delsie knocked on the back door.

I opened the door to let her in, still smiling, and an enormous palmetto bug, a cockroach, jumped on my leg. I screamed. She knocked it off, stomped it, and flushed it away, just as cool as a cucumber; and informed me that I had a serious flood erupting from my back patio.

We are in hard housing, and our house is one of several smaller one bedrooms, built, I'm told, for bachelor officers in the '50s. The cement covered patio has a five foot square piece of decking that we have hung our dive gear over to dry, but have never given much thought as to the why it was there. This is where the water was spewing, as my washing machine drained. Several more palmetto bugs emerged, shook their feet off and headed to the house.

I called the service desk, and tried to explain to a very patient Anita that I had a flood OUTSIDE my house, although it had not rained, and it was somehow connected to the washing machine. She promised to send a plumber right away.

Meanwhile Billy, my husband, called from Tape Escape wondering which movie I'd like to see. By a rare fluke he was on island instead of Meck where he usually works, often not getting home until the late boat at 7:30 p.m.

As more palmetto bugs climbed out of the decking, I firmly suggested he GET HOME NOW!

The plumber and Billy arrived at the same time, and went around back to assess what they were sure were the machinations of a typically hysterical woman. Boy, were they surprised when they lifted, and dropped, the decking. At least 100 palmetto bugs scampered out and headed toward the house.

I locked the plumber and Billy out on the patio, barricading the door. I did pass the cordless phone out the front door that I cracked four inches, so he could report a serious pest problem and the need for utilities to come and deal with the sewer that comes up under the decking. Seems that there is a manhole cover under it, and what I didn't see from my barricaded position at the window in the kitchen, was how many more palmetto bugs were under there. Billy did, and headed to Surfway for some Raid to try and put a barrier across the threshold until the pest control people came.

While standing in the checkout line with his four red cans of Raid, the tall guy behind him spied the cans and asked why he needed so much toxic poison.

"Got a roach problem," replied Billy.

"Have you called pest control?" asked the tall guy. "Sure, but I can't wait. Who knows how long it'll take 'till they show up?"

"Yeah", said the tall guy with a wink. "What jerks! I'll tell you what, I'll follow you in my truck, and we'll see what I can do!"

Of course, the tall guy turned out to be Mike "The Bug Man" Nicholson. Billy said that the four-inch tattoo of a roach on his calf should have been the give-away.

Mike and Billy lifted the decking one more time, armed with sprays and boots. All the roaches that had lived in the sewer for years had been flushed out when the water rose to the top and beyond. There were literally thousands, and they all rushed out as the spraying commenced. I stood at the locked door and screamed while the roaches crawled under the door jam.

Billy and Mike heroically sprayed and stomped for at least a half hour. Delsie came back to lend support, so I threw the dog in the bedroom and we took up position in the yard to yell encouragement and direction – "Incoming 10 o'clock" and "On your right leg" and "They're headed into the A/C!"

These men danced and stomped and shook the roaches off their backs and carried on until not one was left. After Billy swept the carnage, he half-filled a clear Self Help garbage bag with corpses. When the main killing was done, the utilities man came and sucked the standing water (and floaters) from the sewer and then routed the grease clog from further up the line.

We decided to leave the poison down over night, and I have just finished removing the last traces of it this morning. It took several stiff drinks to quell the images last night, so I could sleep. I just thank goodness that Billy was on-island and that this didn't happen after hours.

I want to thank Anita at the Service Desk, who I'm sure I yelled at, but sent help right away. Another thank-you goes to the Utilities guy who stayed after hours and fixed the problem. And a special extra big thank you to Mike Nicholson, definitely a caped crusader against pestilence, and a great guy.

I have to smile at myself for daring to feel smug about living in Kwajalein. It's easy to forget you are living on a speck in the Pacific Ocean, far from anywhere. What makes this community so special is that often help and friendship does step up in line at Surfway, or just walks up to you, and says hello. But, you should never feel smug about anything in life, because you never know what life may throw you – even a thousand palmetto bugs!

Ronnie Mwekto, who recently earned his recertification in pest management, inspects Cafe Pacific as part of his daily rounds Saturday.

Mwekto earns recertified status

By Jan Waddell
Reporter

Ronnie Mwekto recently completed three weeks of grueling training and testing in Texas for recertification in pest management.

"It is a good thing to learn different skills," Mwekto said.

Mwekto has worked for the pest management department for the past six years. It takes three years of training followed by a three-week session of more training and testing, in Texas, to earn certification.

"It is pretty intense training," said Mike Nicholson, pest management lead.

The certification is universal and goes one step beyond state certifications, since the Department of Defense performs the training and testing. It allows the certified person to obtain a job on any DoD installation or state. The DoD certification is the same as in the civilian world only more strict in safety measures, according to Nicholson.

Mwekto earned certifications in several categories including: forest pest management, ornamental and turf, aquatic pest management, right of way pest management, industrial, structural and health-related pest management and public health pest management. Mwekto also passed the basic core exam on safety, chemicals and pesticide issues.

In one exam, the instructor lays out different pests and the student must accurately identify each pest.

The training serves as the basis for the pest management program, which uses several different methods of control, not just chemicals, Nicholson added.

He explained the program looks at the source of the problem.

"We find out why we are having a problem," Nicholson said.

Controls are used before pesticides. If there is a fly problem, for example, pest management crews work to identify and eliminate the source of the problem before using pesticides.

Mwekto said that every morning he makes his rounds and checks for different pests or rodents at Café Pacific, the bakery and other food establishments on Kwajalein.

"We have to do this every day," Mwekto stressed. "It is the first things we do every morning."

"I have some special guys here," Nicholson said. "I know what they have to go through. These guys know what they are doing. They have learned a profession."

Marshallese mark graduation with kadiwojlok

Editor's Note: This is part two of a four-part series on the major events in the life of Marshallese. We started with the first birthday, or kemem, on Oct. 3, and will continue next week with customs of marriage and the following week, of death.

By Jan Waddell
Reporter

From Head Start, kindergarten, elementary school, high school or college, graduation, or kadiwojlok, represents one of the more celebrated customs in the Marshallese culture.

For every stage of development there is a kadiwojlok celebration, said Romeo Alfred, KRS training specialist.

"It is a western concept," he added.

According to Alfred, Marshallese make a big deal out of the kadiwojlok, getting more involved in the kadiwojlok than in other school-related activities.

It serves as a right of passage for the student, and he or she invites the extended family to join in the celebration.

Family is the most important thing in the Marshallese culture, according to Noda Lojkar, USAKA ombudsman and acting mayor of it is held at the church or school from which the student graduates.

After the graduation ceremony, the graduates sing a song of celebration, Sheet added. It is the student's way of thanking the school and leaders.

"The parents are always the first priority," Sheet said.

The parents go all out for the kadiwojlok ceremony, said Lojkar. They buy matching shoes, shirts, pants and gowns if the graduation ceremony has a gown.

The family also invites the leiroj or iroij to the kadiwojlok along with the priest or minister and the mayor.

A pastor or priest always performs a blessing ceremony because all Marshallese ceremonies have deeply rooted religious bases, Alfred said, and graduation never begins without the traditional leaders even if they are a little late, Sheet said.

A potluck meal with all the traditional foods such as fish, chicken and rice follows the ceremony. Family members of the graduate make requests from the outer island family members for regional foods from the different islands such as breadfruit, coconuts, crab, clams, pork and bananas.

Before the meal, the gathering says a prayer to honor the graduate for their accomplishments.

Thompson Tarwoj said the father, mother, grandfather, grandmother, friends and the students all give speeches.

The graduate gives flowers, shells or candy leis to the parents to honor them. Traditional leaders and the graduate receives leis, too.

At each island region, leis are made with an item which is special to that island. In the case of Kwajalein, candy leis are special to that island, Lojkar said. So the candy lei, from Kwajalein, has become a part of the Marshallese custom.

Then there is laughing and talking during the celebration-meal.

The graduate gives a speech to thank everyone for their support, Tarwoj added.

There is also the dollar bill gift which is given to the graduate, but during the kadiwojlok the money gift is given in a card.

The parents of the graduate have gifts for the clan leader, Lojkar said. It is to show the leader honor for being at the kadiwojlok.

He added the Marshallese is very family and community oriented and it is a Marshallese tradition to work together.

Ebeye. The families and extended families of the graduates join together and decide on who will bring what to the kadiwojlok.

"At graduation the family takes part," said Twilyn Sheet, who graduated from Kwajalein Jr./Sr. High School.

The different schools coordinate graduation day so that all members of the families, including the leiroj or iroij, can attend the different graduations, Lojkar added.

If kadiwojlok is from CMI, the event is held on Majuro. Otherwise,

Fire Extinguisher Training

Fire Marshall Mike Gabany assists Job Corps student Yirona Jericho in operating a fire extinguisher Wednesday afternoon, while firefighter Ronnie Dan, background, prepares to light a fire for the next student. The training was an open event held in conjunction with Fire Prevention Week, which runs through Saturday. Students were given a quick run-through of the various types of fires — A, B and C class — followed by a hands-on attempt to put out a fire. Gabany will host another fire extinguisher training event, open to the public, tomorrow, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., in the parking lot behind Ten-Ten.

Light outage makes for dark streets

By Jim Bennett
Editor

A string of street lights on Ocean, Lagoon and Poinsettia roads have gone out, leaving those neighborhood streets dark.

Safety officials are advising residents riding in those areas after dark to bring a flashlight.

According to electrical foreman Toby Mann, the string of wiring was installed in the 1970s or earlier using a series circuit, similar to the old Christmas lights.

"And when one goes out they all go out," he said.

Since then, during the course of repairs, crews have created sub-loops from the one main loop, to minimize the impact when problems arise.

Crews have traced this particular problem to a buried wire between two poles, but will have to wait for a backhoe to become available, before they can begin digging to replace the wire.

"It's in a really bad place for digging," he added, noting a number of other utility lines in the area.

Residents may rent rooms on space-available basis

From Staff Reports

With Halloween and the holiday season fast approaching, residents have intra-atoll overnight options at the Kwaj Lodge and on Roi-Namur, but reservations are on a space-available basis, said Sharon Kay, Kwaj Lodge supervisor.

Rates, initially set by the Army's Cost Billeting Standards, have not changed since KRS assumed the contract March 1, meaning rooms over Macy's run $75 a night for one person or $45 a night for each person if sharing a room, she said.

On the other hand, Roi residents pay significantly less for rooms at the Kwaj Lodge or Pacific Bachelor Quarters, Kay said.

If Roi residents want to rent a room at the Kwaj Lodge, whether it is one of the six private rooms or a room with a shared bathroom, it is $15 for the first person and $5 for each additional person, she said.

Kwaj residents visiting Roi pay the same rate when they stay in Zeus building which has shared bathrooms.

The six Kwaj Lodge rooms with private baths "are on space available," she said. If a TDY person comes and there are no rooms at Macy's or private rooms at the Kwaj Lodge, anyone not on TDY here will be given 24-hours notice and moved to one of the 24 shared bathroom rooms.

"That's a military way of doing things," she said. "If you have a colonel in a DV [distinguished visitor] room and a general comes in, the colonel is bumped."

Answering concerns over the cold temperature in the Kwaj Lodge rooms, Kay said work has been done to help bring the temperature up some and there are extra blankets available for those who ask. The lack of VCRs in every Kwaj Lodge room is also being addressed.

"We can provide them, if someone asks," she said. "We are slowly working through the rooms to upgrade them."

If the Kwaj Lodge is fully booked or upon request, Roi residents, on a space available basis, can get a room at the PBQ at the lower rate, she said.

Although the PBQ may not sound like a nice place to stay, the rooms have been upgraded and offer eight rooms with private bathrooms, and the facility is situated close to downtown, just like Macy's rooms.

"We brought in furniture from Johnston Island with new pillows, televisions and radio clocks," Kay said. "We've made an extra effort to spruce up the rooms."

To help visitors get around the islands, bikes can be rented at $5 a day, Kay said. Bikes can be reserved on Kwaj by calling the Kwaj Lodge, 53485 or on Roi by call the Housing Office, 56004.

Women of the Marshalls gather to talk issues

By KW Hillis
Assistant Editor

The 70 women, from Majuro, Ebeye and the outer islands, brought with them a determination to discuss some very serious issues during the Women United Together in the Marshall Islands Executive Board presentations and workshops held this week on Ebeye.

"What we are talking about is violence against the family," said Marie Maddison, WUTMI Administration director and advisor. "Whether spouse abuse, child abuse and neglect, suicide [or] teen pregnancy, they are all connected to the family itself and how the family treats and takes care of its own and how they relate to others."

WUTMI, founded in 1987, is a non-profit organization which operates educational programs for women focused on family, business, economic skills, health and education, according to Coral Jones, WUTMI Office manager who is part of the Australian Volunteer program. WUTMI also advocates women's issues with the Republic of the Marshall Islands local and national governments.

Iroij Michael Kabua, U.S. Ambassador to the RMI Greta Morris, RMI representative to USAKA Hiram Malolo, Ebeye's acting Mayor Noda Lojkar and WUTMI president Anono Loeak all spoke at the opening ceremony held at Mon La-Mike's, hosted by Leroij Seagull Kabua James and the WUTMI Rukjenleen chapter.

Maddison translated some of Kabua's speech.

"He said that important values to achieve and to promote are love and respect for one another. If we had these, then we wouldn't have all the other issues that we are talking about," she said. "He mentioned all [the issues] as challenges for the women."

Noting that she was surprised when he listed all of the issues facing the women, she added, "That was good."

The problem has been that traditionally Marshallese women don't talk about these issues, said Jones.

"It is quite a radical thing to do, and they are brave doing it because they could risk their family's displeasure ... [and Kabua's statement] was an acknowledgement, to reaffirm what we are doing."

Kabua surprised the entire WUTMI audience when he presented Loeak with a deke in nin, or paddle rock, he took many hours to make out of a giant clam shell he found, indicating that he expects the group to continue and not go away.

"It is very symbolic," Maddison said. "It is meant to be forever. That is what a mother passes on to a daughter over the centuries. This is supposed to be passed on from [WUTMI] president to [WUTMI] president."

"You would use it to break down major issues, major problems, into pieces, that is what he said," she said. "We have never gotten this big support, even from Majuro, the seat of government, as much as we have gotten here."

The support may give Marshallese women the strength to come forward, Jones said. If they see that Kabua thinks it is that important, they may want to be a part of it.

Morris also voiced her encouragement of WUTMI, noting the serious issues facing Marshallese women and their families along with all women worldwide.

Political participation, voting for the best and most qualified person to fill political positions, and education, which gives people both knowledge and skills, are two things that are critical to solving these problems, she said.

"The United States believes women's rights are human rights," she said. "I hope you look upon me as someone who cares deeply about your concerns and wants to work with you in finding solutions."

This week the group will investigate the issues and formulate plans of action to take back to their local and national government officials, Maddison said.

Twice a year, the group brings together the board members consisting of "the leroi, the six officers, the 24 presidents of the chapters, the former WUTMI presidents and the founding members," said Anono Loeak, WUTMI president, during her address.

The children asked questions about where the dogs live, what they eat, how many K-9 Unit dogs there are and even where the officers live. The class brought a bag of dog treats they had made out of flour, milk, beef bouillon and egg to give to the dogs.

Week-long schedule packed ...

But the executive officers didn't wait for the opening ceremony to start work on the presentations. The officers were hard at work upstairs in Kwajalein's Religious Education Building Tuesday morning and afternoon, said Suza Goltz, Yokwe Yuk Women's Club president. The YYWC hosted a hospitality lounge for the women arriving by plane to the atoll.

The week is packed with executive board meetings 8-10 a.m. each morning followed by presentations on many subjects including substance abuse prevention, prevention of rape and a local medicine project. Four hours each afternoon is devoted to workshops including small business development, diabetes prevention and three Parental Information and Resource Center projects including "Our children, our role, our future."

All problems stem from the transition that takes place as the culture moves from the traditional ways to the new ways, Maddison said.

Influenced by the social customs of other countries that have been involved in the Marshalls over the years, the country has jumped into the future without the underpinnings or a way to keep balance as social customs change.

One of the major underpinnings of the traditional society is motherhood and the songs sung at the opening ceremony and the theme of this conference reminded the group of the importance of mothers, she said.

"Jutak im Bin," sung by some of the women at the opening ceremony means stand up and be firm," she said.

The theme of the conference Kejiminid im uk enad; kab deka in nin en ad im wa en waad, "is motherhood, fishing net, canoe and paddle rock; that is what she is to the culture and to the family," Maddison said.

Originally the wording of the theme incorrectly used the word mother or waan rather than mothers or waad, and Kabua corrected it, she said.

"He said that without a lot of people, you are not strong," she said.

Configure Internet Explorer to use the new proxy server

From Staff Reports

An Information Technology upgrade has residents now needing to reconfigure their Internet Explorer proxy settings.

IT recently installed "a new, more powerful fire-wall" that provides proxy Web services, said Trish Wildfang, IT Technical Support manager.

The directions are listed below, but are also available at the IT Help Desk in Building 806, or at the Grace Sherwood Library.

1. Click Start, point to Settings, click Control Panel, and then double-click Internet or Internet Options (depending on IE version).
2. Click the Connections tab
3. In the Dial-up box, highlight the Island Internet connection (this will be named whatever the user named it when they added it) and click Settings.
  - a. Select Use Proxy Server check box.
- Address: 10.1.1.8 Port: 3128
  - b. Click Advanced Settings and check the box to Use same proxy server for all protocols.
  - c. Click OK twice to apply settings.
4. Back in the Connections tab, click LAN Settings, and then click to select the Use Proxy Server check box.
  - a. In the Address box, type the following proxy server information: Address: 10.1.1.8 Port: 3128
  - b. Click Advanced Settings and check the box to Use same proxy server for all protocols.
  - c. Click OK twice to apply settings.
5. Now try to connect to the Internet.

Outgoing SMTP Mail

For users using SMTP mail at home, the outgoing SMTP server has to be set to: Outgoing SMTP: island-gateway.kwajalein.com.

The way to configure mail varies on the various clients such as Outlook Express, Eudora and Netscape Mail. Refer to the applications help menu.

KAISC fishing tourney to benefit Lib

By Jan Waddell
Reporter

The Kwajalein Atoll International Sportfishing Club will hold its first annual Columbus Day Fishing Tournament Monday from 8 a.m. until 6 p.m., which will benefit Lib Island Christmas fund.

"The fishing community has close ties to the people on Lib," said David Coffey, president of the KAISC. "We want to do more than just fish. We want to give back to the community which allows us to live and fish in their water."

All proceeds from the tournament will go to buy materials to put a roof on the Lib Island school.

Some of the school is unusable due to the roof being in disrepair, and the students are sent off island to attend schools on Ebeye or Majuro, Coffey said.

Volunteers will go to Lib Island, repair the roof and give out Christmas gifts of school supplies to the children and fishing supplies to the adults.

It will be like an old-fashioned barn building, according to Coffey.

The tournament is open to anyone interested in sport-fishing even if they have never been fishing or do not have a boat, Coffey added.

All boats will fish the same area. The B-boat range has been extended to 15 miles around the DCCB.

Prizes will be awarded in several categories including largest ahi, largest billfish, largest ono, largest mahi mahi, largest dogtooth tuna and an aggregate division which will include all other fish. There will also be a smallest fish category and best sportsman.

Each boat will consist of a captain and five crew members, and the entrance fee will be $150. The entrance fee will include four T-shirts; pizza and refreshments at the captain's meeting; coffee and doughnuts the morning of the tournament and an awards banquet, to be held at a later date.

Anyone wanting to fish in the tournament needs only to show up at the captain's meeting and register, Coffey said. All efforts will be made to not only get that person on a boat, but supply them with fishing gear if necessary.

Organizers hope to acquaint people with sport fishing, but the main goal of this tournament is to raise enough money to repair the school house roof on Lib Island.

"We are willing to work with every individual who wants to fish," Coffey said. "We are just taking it to the next level."

The captain's meeting will be held 7 p.m. tomorrow at Emon Beach pavilion one. Anyone interested should attend the meeting. Pizza and beverages will be provided. Rules will be discussed and anyone who is without a boat or complete crew will be paired up at this time.

Steve Moore added that at the close of the tournament, 6 p.m., and after weigh-in, some of the fish could possibly be purchased at the small boat marina.

"We want to generate some interest within the community about sport fishing," Moore said.

Coffey added if people are unable to fish in the tournament, donations of lumber, roofing supplies and money will help complete the goal on Lib Island.

The Kwajalein Hourglass

Halloween set to bring out the spookiness in residents

By KW Hillis
Assistant Editor

A cowboy or Harry Potter? A princess or Britney Spears? These are the hard decisions that boys and girls on Kwajalein are making because Halloween is less than a month away.

But children aren't the only ones making decisions for Halloween parties, at least not on Kwajalein and Roi. On both islands, past Halloween parties have brought out both typical costumes — witches and Frankenstein's — and also more atypical costumes — King Arthur's knights from Monty Python's Holy Grail movie, complete with halved coconuts used to imitate hoof's hooves.

This year's planned Halloween events will be no exception with costume events scheduled for adults, both unaccompanied and accompanied; teens and children. Along with the parties Halloween movies are scheduled for Oct 25-27 and Nov. 1 at the Richardson Theater and Yokwe Yuk Theater on Kwajalein and Building C on Roi, said Kathy Bates, Community Activities Entertainment superintendent. See the Hourglass for the movie titles and schedule the Friday before the weekend.

"The movies at the Rich will be suitable for children," she said.

Children's events

The Shaving Cream Social, Friday, Oct. 24 at the Millican Family Pool is a Kwaj tradition.

Children in kindergarten through 12th grade, show up in bathing suits at the pool during their age-group designated times (see ad in this paper for designated times) and are issued a can of non-mentholated shaving cream to cover themselves and the other kids with, she said.

"It's an internationally-known event and a lot of fun for the kids," Bates said. "If the kids want to bring extra shaving cream, it needs to be non-mentholated."

Children's Carnival and Costume Parade, Oct. 27, 4-7 p.m., CRC gym is for children from newborn to 6th grade.

"There will be games, snacks and things for them to do," Bates said.

The parade, so each child can show off their costumes, will be broken down by age groups (see ad in today's paper), she said.

Trick-or-treating is Friday, Oct. 31, 6:30-8:30 p.m. in the housing area.

"Children should only go to homes that have porch lights on and skip the houses that don't," Bates said, adding that the bachelors' quarters are off-limits to people younger than 21 years of age.

Teen events

Besides the Shaving Cream Social event, 7th - 12th grade teens are invited to the Youth Center to hear the American Forces Entertainment rock band Jag Star, Oct. 31, 7-9 p.m.

"I would encourage the kids to show up in costume if they can," Bates said.

Adult events

The Catamaran Costume Cruise for all unaccompanied residents, Oct. 31, 6-8 p.m., is sponsored by the Protestant Chapel Unaccompanied Personnel committee.

"Knowing that Halloween night is pretty much directed toward kids and trick-or-treating in neighborhoods" the chapel's unaccompanied personnel committee came up with "a fun thing for unaccompanied folks to do," said The Rev. Rick Funk, Protestant chaplain.

"It's not meant to be for couples only," he said. "It's for people to come and hang out together ... watch the sunset, have some food and listen to DJ music."

Funk and the committee, headed by Lydi Johnson hope that people wear costumes or at least one costume item, like funny shoes, wig or hat. There will be prizes for costumes and treats for those who have a trick, Funk said.

"You can sing a song or do a magic trick ... do a trick, get a treat," he said.

The cost is $8 per person and the tickets go on sale Oct. 15 at Community Activities, 53331, Johnson said. Attendees can bring something to drink on board if they want something other than sodas or water.

Gilligan's is the Halloween spot for adult costumed characters, Saturday, Nov. 1, according to Debbie Spencer, Yokwe Yuk Club manager.

Jag Star will perform starting 9 p.m. A costume contest is scheduled during the band's break, 10-10:30 p.m., she said.

"We'll have different categories for the contest, to be announced later," she said. "People should start planning their costumes now."

Special spooky drinks will be available at the bar which opens at 5 p.m. and the grill will be open all night, she added.

Roi events

A Halloween Golf Tournament is scheduled Oct. 26 after work, according to Mike Ellison, Community Activities superintendent.

AFE rock band Jag Star will provide the music at The Outrigger Halloween party, Wednesday, Oct 29. The event will start 6:30 p.m.

Residents are encouraged to wear costumes and the club will be decorated for the event, he said.
